

GOP, Dem Chieftains Debate To Draw Over Sen. McCarthy

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Republican and Democratic national chairmen, Leonard W. Hall and Stephen A. Mitchell, apparently can claim an audience-awarded draw in their verbal 10 rounds over Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.).

The two party leaders debated last night before about 1,000 Georgetown University students, whose cheers and boos seemed pretty evenly divided.

Mitchell asserted the Republicans don't deserve the vote of young people because "they have failed to bring McCarthy under control."

Declaring that the GOP is conducting a "campaign of vilification that can destroy us all," he said:

"We must not put slander and calumny upon each other for if we do, we destroy the system under which we live."

Hall replied, in effect:

"Look who's talking about us. You ought to go back and read some of former President Truman's speeches," he shot at Mitchell, adding:

"I won't ask you to read the letters he wrote."

While Hall and Mitchell sparred, the object of so much of their attention got ready for road work —speaking tours both this week and later, during the congressional campaign.

McCarthy gave every indication that he doesn't care whether the Republican National Committee sponsors future speeches or not, and that the opinion of some of his GOP Senate colleagues that he ought to stay in Washington this week for a showdown on his row with the Army isn't going to keep him off the road.

Moreover, there were broad hints that his speaking style and choice of themes will not be toned down. He is expected to use a new version of the "20 years of treason" theme that brought angry protests earlier this year from Democrats.

McCarthy is going through his committee files for ammunition and indicated he is hoping to come up with 20 specific cases of what he calls treason.

He speaks in Chicago tomorrow and the next day, in Milwaukee Friday and Oklahoma City Saturday.

His plans for later in the year apparently are to speak from coast to coast, aiming at enemies either Democratic or Republican during the congressional campaign.

Hall and Mitchell, both Georgetown law graduates, made their set and rebuttal speeches and then took on questions from the floor of a packed auditorium.

Hall fielded one of the first questions which inquired "if Sen. McCarthy is causing a definite split in your party."

"Absolutely not," replied the GOP chairman, who said recently that some of McCarthy's tactics were harming the party. There was laughter, applause and a few boos.

"There's only one leader, only one spokesman for the Republican party and he is the President of the United States," Hall added.

Mitchell said the Democrats have been split at times in the past but he said the issue today is whether a Republican senator, supported by a group of other Republicans, is to dominate the executive department for the purpose of the next election and of advancing his own political future.

Mitchell he was asked to explain the "tremendous infiltration of Communists in the thirties and forties in the United States government."

"The charge is beyond any comparison with the fact," he said tartly. "There was not a tremendous infiltration."

He added that the Republicans have been unable to prove their charges that the government was "overrun" with Communists. Hall stepped up to say he didn't know how many Communists had been in the government, but "one Alger Hiss and one Harry Dexter White were too many."

McCarthy has said he is getting requests for speaking appearances at the rate of 25 or more a day. The Wisconsin senator has told friends that he may accidentally happen to make some addresses in states where there are Republican primaries, although he has contended he has a rule against interfering in such affairs.

He has on his desk an invitation to speak in Maine, where

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, who has criticized him in the past, is being opposed for the senatorial nomination by Robert L. Jones, former staff aide to Sen. Potter (R-Mich.).

Jones already has been praising McCarthy in early campaign speeches.

The Republican National Committee, which helped get out the text of Vice President Nixon's remarks when he criticized McCarthy in a radio-television talk last Saturday night, apparently is avoiding future scheduling of the senator as a party speaker.

Party Leaders Seeking Votes In Tax Fight

Ike's Plea Against Income Levy Cut Fails To Slow Dem Effort

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's opposition to a Democratic tax cut plan sent Republican and Democratic House leaders scrambling today for votes that may decide the issue.

The President carried his opposition to the country last night in a radio and television address in which he denounced the Democratic proposal to boost individual income tax exemptions as unsound and politically inspired.

House Speaker Martin (R-Mass.) said he is "quite sure the President's address will have the effect of rallying many Republicans and Democrats to his stand."

But Rep. Rayburn (D-Tex.), the Democratic House leader, indicated that his party plans to press the tax cut campaign in the House. He said the Eisenhower tax program gives "favored treatment to a few taxpayers but not to the many."

Rayburn was picked to state the Democrats' case on radio-TV tonight on the eve of the House battle opening tomorrow.

AWING HIM will be Sen. George of Georgia, senior Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Cooper of Tennessee, ranking Democrat on the House Ways and Means Committee.

House Democrats are pushing a proposal to boost individual tax exemptions to $700 from the present $600. George has proposed an increase to $800 this year and $1,000 in 1955.

Eisenhower asserted last night that this would lead to "bigger deficits, further inflation."

An $100 increase in the personal tax exemption would save tax.

Senate Panel In Showdown On McCarthy-Army Feuding

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Investigations Subcommittee voted today to explore at public hearings, with the witnesses under oath, the bitter feud between Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.), its chairman, and Army officials. McCarthy himself agreed to take a seat on the sidelines with Sen. Mundt (R-SD) sitting as the acting chairman.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Investigations Subcommittee went into a showdown meeting today on Sen. McCarthy's row with Army officials as Democratic members demanded a full public hearing on the charges and countercharges.

Sen. McClellan (D-Ark.), who calls signals for the group's Democratic members, declared he would insist at the closed door meeting that the subcommittee:

1. Ask that its parent body, the Senate Government Operations Committee, take over the inquiry.
2. Have all testimony taken in public hearings.
3. That the group hire a "special and impartial" staff to assist in the hearings. Asked whether he was disposed to "let the staff that is under fire" participate, McClellan answered "no, sir."

The subcommittee's entire membership of four Republicans and three Democrats turned out for the meeting. Sen. Lennor (D-NC), a member of the parent government operations committee, went into the room a few minutes after the session was convened.

SENS. SYMINGTON (D-Mo) and Jackson (D-Wash.) spoke staunch support for McClellan's stand as they went into the hearing. Like McClellan, they said they would demand also that the Army and McCarthy give them any additional

More Protests Voiced In Poll On Lake Issue

The signature roundup conducted by The Herald to register public opinion on the Memorial Lake issue continued Tuesday to show widespread dissatisfaction with the plan of the Ohio Wildlife Council to reduce the size of the proposed lake.

A former superintendent of the State Highway Department, Marvin H. Dreisbach, who formerly lived in Pickaway Township but now lives in Circleville, compared the project with that recently completed in Highland County.

"I understand the lake there covers about 1,600 acres and already is stocked with fish," he said. "If the state can do it there, why can't it construct a lake of at least 150 acres in Pickaway County?"

"We were promised a 160-acre lake and that is what we should have. It's an odd thing that the dam we have there now is not a good one. The department built the dam, and now the same department is going to build another one."

Waiting List Begins To Form For PTA Garden Plow Offer

District householders were lining up with enthusiasm Tuesday for a bargain offer, designed to help launch the traditional Spring garden work and provide permanent entertainment for one of the local schools—all in the one deal.

Members of the Washington Township Parent-Teacher Association are contracting to plow gardens. Funds received will be used to purchase a television set for Washington Township school.

Residents throughout the area, anxious to plan this year's garden but not too anxious to undertake the preliminaries, have already started to ask for details on the plan, and to inquire when their turn may come on the waiting list. All those interested are asked to phone 1731 to complete arrangements, Monday through Friday between 9 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

The PTA group, headed by President Pete Bowman, explained calls should be made at the earliest opportunity so that a full list of customers can be formed and the work schedule thus made speedy and steady. Oakley Leist, principal of Washington Township School, has pledged all possible assistance for the venture, an effort which has drawn commendation from community leaders in Circleville and other parts of the district.

Wallace Hopes For 'Satisfactory' 'Compromise' On Lake Question

Ed Wallace, Pickaway County state representative, said Tuesday he has "real hopes" for some form of "satisfactory compromise" to end the Memorial Lake controversy once and for all.

Wallace emphasized he used the word "compromise" only because "so many of us have ideas on plans for the lake, and I'm hoping all those interested can be satisfied." He also reiterated he is "willing to do whatever the people want me to do to help get this thing settled."

Meanwhile, it was announced the two state senators for this district, Robert Shaw and Wilbur Shull, have definitely promised to attend the giant mass meeting scheduled here Thursday night. The meeting will be tantamount to a public protest against the latest plans outlined for the long-argued lake-and-park development.

Overwhelming public opposition has been stirred by a proposal to reduce the lake itself from about 161 acres to approximately 55 acres. Wallace disclosed the new plan here recently and later confirmed that the Ohio Wildlife Council "seems to feel the new plan would be the best one."

SUBSEQUENTLY, following widespread criticism in the district, it was explained in Columbus the council's plan is still open for tests of "feasibility". Surveys, it was explained, may show the plans for a smaller lake are actually not the best—thus indicating the council's proposal is not regarded completely "nailed down".

A large attendance expected at Thursday's meeting, scheduled for Memorial Hall at 8 p. m., will probably support demands for a return to the original plans, calling for the 161-acre lake. Leading the fight for such action is the Pickaway County Farmers and Sportsmen's Association, key group in arrangements for the mass meeting.

In addition to the two state senators, officials expected to attend include:

A. W. (Chink) Marion, a native of Circleville and present director of the Ohio Department of Natural Resources; Charles Dambach, head of the wildlife council; and Bill Owens, chief engineer for that group.

Looking forward to the gathering, Wallace said:

"I'm glad all these men are coming down from Columbus, be-

Petition Campaign Continues Strong

The petition drive protesting against the plan of the Ohio Wildlife Council to reduce the size of the proposed Memorial Lake to one-third of that originally intended gathered momentum Tuesday.

Many persons have called at the office of The Herald or at the Circleville Fire Department to sign the petitions and a number of persons have taken it upon themselves to circulate the forms among their friends, thus assuring an impressive number of signatures to bolster the protest drive.

Petitions may be signed either at The Herald office or the fire department. They will be turned over to the council at the public meeting on the issue in Memorial Hall Thursday night.

Akron Educators OK Polio Vaccine

AKRON (AP)—The Akron Board of Education voted last night to approve participation of 14,309 first, second and third grade public school children in a mass polio vaccine test next month.

Similar action will have to be taken by school boards for about 14,500 other Summit County youngsters before the tests, which also require parental consent. In two other Ohio counties—Montgomery and Richland—the tests will be made to determine the extent of immunity from infantile paralysis provided by the vaccine.

Angry Parents Plan Appeal Of School Feud To Lausche

SOUTH POINT (AP)—A petition in their pockets and action on their minds, a group of parents from this southern Ohio community is off to see the governor today.

The parents don't like the way their local school board has been acting and they intend to tell Gov. Frank J. Lausche all about it.

Their teen-age children are angry at the school board, too, and they have been cutting classes since early last week.

The youngsters struck to protest the firing of two high school teachers—Athletic Coach Jack Dick and John Ayers, an English teacher. Since then tension has been mounting between the parents, who strongly are in favor of the strike, and the board, which wants the children back in class immediately.

Last night, both sides decided on courses of action in separate meetings.

THE BOARD decided to press charges of contributing to the delinquency of juveniles against parents who keep their children out of school after tomorrow; the parents decided to take the case to the governor.

The board also decided to deny promotion for the next school year to any pupil who "shall engage in a strike against the operation of the school."

It threatened court action against parents and dismissal for teachers aiding the strike.

The parents signed a petition saying "our school board is unfair to our children and our fine teachers." A committee of six, however, recommended the youngsters go back to school until the governor takes action.

The board says law doesn't require it to say why it dropped the two teachers. "It's a matter of principle, too," said Ennis Austin, board member.

But one teacher says a school board member told him he was going to get rid of Coach Dick because he didn't let the board member's son play basketball on the varsity team.

The students last week agreed to return to class when the board promised to meet last night with parents, and about 400 of the high school's 500 students did return. But the board failed to show up at the mass meeting.

Trucking Firm To Leave Ohio

COLUMBUS (AP)—Frank Eichenberger, president of Motorways, Inc., says he will set up two new trucking firms in West Virginia because of truck-tax reciprocity breakdown between Ohio and other states.

By licensing trucks under the New Motorways Corp. of West Virginia and Motorways Leasing Corp., the company can avoid punitive taxes levied by states retaliating against Ohio for failure to break reciprocity under the new axle-mile tax. Eichenberger said Motorways Corp. of Ohio will continue to operate here.

Part Of Downed Jetliner Found

PORTO AZZURRO, Elba (AP)—A salvage ship has recovered a large piece of the British jet Comet airliner which crashed off Elba Jan. 10 with the loss of 35 lives.

The ship Sea Salvor, leading the British Navy search for wreckage of the craft, made the find yesterday in the sea south of this Mediterranean island. The piece, largest yet recovered, was made up of part of the tail and wing.

Authorities said none of the 20 missing bodies of crew and passengers has been found in the recovered wreckage.

City Council's OK Seen For Annex Plans

City Council Tuesday night is expected to move Circleville's annexation plan down the home stretch, but continued debate loomed for at least two other important subjects on the community's "unfinished business" slate.

Chairman Bob Adkins of the City Planning and Zoning Commission has already announced his group will recommend that Council accept an annexation chart revised by Pickaway County commissioners. The city lawmakers, plagued by far more controversial matters, are expected to follow the commission's wishes without major discussion.

The key annexation ordinance, under which approximately 322 acres would be added to the corporation's northern end, is due to get first reading at Tuesday night's session.

Council will probably find the going much rougher on at least two other subjects—improvements for the city's fire department and ways and means to ease the parking headache in downtown Circleville. Both subjects were discussed at length in a committee huddle held by Council since the last regular session.

However, there was no evidence that any plan has been devised to satisfy most of those interested.

Record-Size Atom Smasher Being Unveiled

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP)—The greatest thing yet in atom smashers—a mammoth machine which will lead scientists onward into the exciting mysteries of the atomic nucleus—was unveiled today at the University of California.

With this electronic giant scientists may turn up some more surprise discoveries such as those which led to the atom bomb. A vast new field for deriving energy from matter is possible.

The new machine, called the bevatron, weighs 10,000 tons. It cost $9½ million and was financed by the Atomic Energy Commission.

A month ago the machine whipped up a thin beam of atomic projectiles to a feeble 20 million volts. Gradually it was accelerated until on March 12 it produced atom bullets of five billion volts in energy.

As previous atom-smashing machines increased their power the atom was smashed more devastatingly, until now there are some two dozen known nuclear particles.

And the end is not yet. Many of these particles have a lifetime of only a few millionths of a second, then they change into something else. Or one of them changes into two or more others. There is no certainty as to what the really unchangeable fundamental specks are that constitute matter.

The bevatron may settle some of this uncertainty. When the fundamental parts of the atomic nucleus are known, researchers will know better what they can do with the pieces. With the bevatron they now are entering an "anything can happen" era.

More Protests Voiced In Poll On Lake Issue

The signature roundup conducted by The Herald to register public opinion on the Memorial Lake issue continued Tuesday to show widespread dissatisfaction with the plan of the Ohio Wildlife Council to reduce the size of the proposed lake.

A former superintendent of the State Highway Department, Marvin H. Dreisbach, who formerly lived in Pickaway Township but now lives in Circleville, compared the project with that recently completed in Highland County.

"I understand the lake there covers about 1,600 acres and already is stocked with fish," he said. "If it's state can do it there, why can't it construct a lake of at least 150 acres in Pickaway County?"

"We were promised a 160-acre lake and that is what we should have. It's an odd thing that the dam we have there now is not a good one. The department built the dam, and now the same department-

Waiting List Begins To Form For PTA Garden Plow Offer

District householders were lining up with enthusiasm Tuesday for a bargain offer, designed to help launch the traditional Spring garden work and provide permanent entertainment for one of the local schools—all in the one deal.

Members of the Washington Township Parent-Teacher Association are contracting to plow gardens. Funds received will be used to purchase a television set for Washington Township school.

Residents throughout the area, anxious to plan this year's garden but not too anxious to undertake the preliminaries, have already started to ask for details on the plan, and to inquire when their turn may come on the waiting list. All those interested are asked to phone 1731 to complete arrangements, Monday through Friday between 9 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

The PTA group, headed by President Pete Bowman, explained calls should be made at the earliest opportunity so that a full list of customers can be formed and the work schedule thus made speedy and steady. Oakley Leist, principal of Washington Township School, has pledged all possible assistance for the venture, an effort which has drawn commendation from community leaders in Circleville and other parts of the district.

Frank P. Carr, the subcommittee's chief of staff who is one of those under fire, and Robert F. Kennedy, special counsel to the Democratic members, stayed only briefly inside the meeting room with the senators. They left, refusing to comment.

Roy Cohn, chief counsel, did not go near the meeting room.

McCarthy accuses Secretary of the Army Stevens and John G. Adams, the Army's general counsel, of using "blackmail" tactics to block his investigations of alleged Reds in units.

Army officials accused McCarthy and Roy Cohn, the subcommittee's chief counsel, of exerting improper pressures to win special favors for a drafted pal, wealthy Pvt. G. David Schine, a former member of their staff.

Worried Senate Republican leaders called a closed-door huddle of their own to consider their course in the blazing fight which pits Republican against Republican.

McCarthy had earlier agreed to

Hopes Dwindling For Drive's Goal

Hopes of meeting the quota for this year's Red Cross Fund Drive dwindled Tuesday as all but a few of the contribution reports were recorded.

Aimed at a goal of $10,876, the recent drive has netted over $7,000 on the basis of reports so far. However, only four more townships and one or two of the industries have yet to list their returns.

The Rev. Robert Weaver, chairman of the drive, has emphasized the success of this year's effort as compared to other years, "even though we may not actually meet our quota."

Mystery Tax 'Gift' Arrives

COLUMBUS (AP)—The annual mystery envelope arrived again yesterday at the Columbus Internal Revenue Service office.

The envelope contained no letter, no completed tax form—only $400 in currency.

The envelopes have been coming for nine years. The first contained $250. Each year since it has been $400.

There always is a name and a return address on the outside of the envelope. The name, however, always is different. The return address always is the same—that of the South Congregational Church.

Red-Backed Masses Aim For Fortress

Indochinese War's Bitterest Battle Sees Losses Mounting High

HANOI, Indochina (AP)—Screaming Vietnam shock troops surged today to within a half mile of the heart of the Dien Bien Phu fortress, then faltered and fell back under sheets of fire from the French garrison, packing their dead and wounded with them.

Masses of the Communist-led rebels staged the attack from the encircling hills in a driving rain, firing rifles, pistols and machine-guns and throwing grenades and spears. French-manned American guns tore wide gaps in their ranks.

Unofficial estimates of the Vietnamese dead and wounded in the four days of battle for the wire-enclosed plain, in a strategic sector of the northwest Indochina, rose to between 6,000 and 8,000.

Bullet-riddled bodies of rebel dead dangled like scarecrows on the barbed wire as the outnumbered French Union forces fought desperately to keep the plain out of rebel hands.

It was the most savage battle of the seven-year Indochina war. Early today the outcome, certain to have a major effect on the Geneva conference next month, was still in doubt.

THE FIGHTING which began Saturday afternoon raged furiously through last night as thousands wildly screaming Communist-led rebels, backed by artillery from Communist China, charged repeatedly into the burning, American-armed defenses of the fortress.

The "do-or-die" fanatic rebel charges over the mounting bodies of their own dead resembled the Communist onslaughts on United Nations troops in the Korean War. For the first time in the long Indochina war, the Vietnamese abandoned their guerrilla tactics for an all-out frontal assault.

In the first 48 hours of fighting, the Vietnamese wrested two northern and northeastern strong-points from the French Union defenders.

But the French high command said the center of the Vietnamese-encircled plain was still intact and the balance of the outer perimeter also was still holding.

They predicted the defenders would hold out until the rebels had worn themselves out.

The French command gave no estimate of its own losses. But it admitted casualties were "appreciable" among the garrison of French Moroccans, Vietnamese, (Continued on Page Two) payers about $2.4 billion and add that much to the budget deficit that the administration is struggling to keep down, GOP leaders say.

Under the Democratic plan, more than four million persons with low income or heading large families would be relieved of all income tax payment. The per capita saving for most families in the middle income brackets or below would come to about $20. It would be more in higher brackets.

Eisenhower urged Congress now to go no further in tax reduction than the huge GOP-sponsored bill to overhaul most of the nation's existing tax laws. He said this bill, liberalizing many deductions, would benefit millions of individuals and encourage "the growth and expansion of industry, the creation of jobs." It would cost the Treasury $1.4 billion a year.

IT IS TO THIS bill that Democrats hope to tack the boost in personal exemptions.

In his talk last night, Eisenhower did not mention another tax bill pending in Congress. This would cut about 25 excise taxes by $912 million a year, a reduction the President also opposes.

At the outset, Eisenhower said his administration "has asked the Congress to approve a great program to build a stronger America for all our people." He cited as its goals expansion of social security, broader unemployment insurance, more and better homes and elimination of slums, improved health, a better farm program, improved labor laws and wider overseas markets.

"Most of these things cost money," he told his nationwide audience. "Without adequate revenue, most of them would be abandoned or curtailed. That is why our tax proposal is the cornerstone of our whole effort."

FBI Captures Extortionist In California

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An FBI agent, made up to look like makeup manufacturer Max Factor Jr., helped trap an unemployed man accused of trying to extort $30,000 from Factor under threat of blasting him and his family with a time bomb.

Wendell Ringholz, 47, formerly of Cleveland and father of three children, was arrested yesterday as he picked up a dummy bundle of money in an orange grove in San Fernando Valley.

The arrest climaxed week-long negotiations by letter, telephone and a newspaper ad and marked the third time the package had been planted at spots designated by the would-be extortionist. The first two times he apparently had been frightened off.

Last Thursday night Factor, head of the cosmetics firm founded by his father, his wife Mildred and their son Donald, 19, left their Beverly Hills mansion after a man telephoned that a time bomb was hidden in the wall. Another son, Mark, 15, is in private school.

Yesterday Factor received a special delivery letter and a telephone call telling him to place the money on a white sheet he would find in a certain orange grove. His impersonator drove Factor's sports car to the grove and the money was placed on the sheet. Several FBI agents were hidden in the area.

Minutes later, the FBI said, Ringholz walked into the grove and picked up the package. He was arrested immediately.

Agents quoted him as saying his family knew nothing of the plot, that he was deeply in debt.

Change In Aid Law Is Sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Bender (R-Ohio) has asked Congress to pass a law allowing any American community to refuse federal aid money without affecting others.

A dispute between Harrison County and the State of Ohio apparently caused Bender's action. Harrison is the only Ohio county which has refused federal money for its disabled.

By law, all 88 Ohio counties must participate in the federal program if the state is to get aid.

2 A-Plant Aides Injured In Fire

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two men are in critical condition from burns received yesterday in a flash fire at the Fernald atomic plant near here.

Clarence L. Karl, manager, identified them as Byron Stephens, 21, Moores Hill, Ind., and Bert Dwenger, 45, Batesville, Ind.

Five other men were less seriously burned. No flammable material was involved in the fire, according to Karl. He said the fire resulted from an "accident" in a dry chemical unit and caused damage estimated at $2,000.

ment comes along and condemns it. "If they keep on they will have the size of our Pickaway County lake reduced to the size of a hog-wallow."

Winfield Koch, superintendent of the Pickaway County Children's Home which borders on the site of the proposed lake, said:

"A LAKE OF 50 acres isn't going to help the general water situation out here at all, and isn't going to help the water level in the wells."

"Naturally, the kids out here are disappointed and they can't understand why we can't have a decent size lake. They have read in the paper that the lake is going to be 160 acres, then they read that it is only going to be 50 acres. One youngster asked me the other day, 'Why do they lie about it? If we lie to anyone, you tell us it is wrong.'"

"It might be a little different if reducing the size of the lake to one-third meant the work could be done at one-third the cost of the larger lake. But we all know that is not true."

A Circleville attorney, Earl Smith, added his voice to the wave of protest.

"It is a damned shame something hasn't been done about it a long time ago," he said. "As has been pointed out previously, a 50-acre lake isn't going to reach back far enough to be fed by the channels in the area. I can't see the necessity of making the lake any smaller than was originally planned."

A. C. NOECKER, Ashville, is another bitter opponent to the plan.

"Whatever strong language you can use is all right with me," he declared. "Reducing the size of the lake is nothing but politics. Somebody wants to give the boot to Pickaway County and they live right in Columbus. They want to a lot of expense to build lakes at Logan and other places, why can't they go to some expense to build a good lake in this county?"

Red-Backed Masses Aim For Fortress

Algerians, German Foreign Legionnaires and Thai tribesmen.

THE FRENCH in Saigon predicted the Vietnam could not maintain their intense attacks of the past 48 hours longer than two more days. By that time, they said, the rebel troops and their supplies, the latter painfully trekked by coolies over the hundreds of jungle miles from Chinese dumps, would be exhausted.

Rainy weather, Vietnam anti-aircraft and rebel bombardment of Dien Bien Phu's air strips reduced the fort's airborne supply line to a minimum. But a number of C47 Dakotas still were able to land with medical supplies and take off for Hanoi with the worst of the wounded.

The hardest attack on the fortress, 175 miles west of Hanoi, came on its northern outpost. One section of the stronghold gave way Saturday night; late Monday night the balance of the defenders withdrew under the cover of forces sent from the center.

The rebels took the sector after one of the heaviest artillery poundings they have been able to mount so far in the long conflict.

payers about $2.4 billion and add that much to the budget deficit that the administration is struggling to keep down, GOP leaders say.

Under the Democratic plan, more than four million persons with low income or heading large families would be relieved of all income tax payment. The per capita saving for most families in the middle income brackets or below would come to about $20. It would be more in higher brackets.

Eisenhower urged Congress now to go no further in tax reduction than the huge GOP-sponsored bill to overhaul most of the nation's existing tax laws. He said this bill, liberalizing many deductions, would benefit millions of individuals and encourage "the growth and expansion of industry, the creation of jobs." It would cost the Treasury $1.4 billion a year.

IT IS TO THIS bill that Democrats hope to tack the boost in personal exemptions.

In his talk last night, Eisenhower did not mention another tax bill pending in Congress. This would cut about 25 excise taxes by $912 million a year, a reduction the President also opposes.

At the outset, Eisenhower said his administration "has asked the Congress to approve a great program to build a stronger America for all our people." He cited as its goals expansion of social security, broader unemployment insurance, more and better homes and elimination of slums, improved health, a better farm program, improved labor laws and wider overseas markets.

"Most of these things cost money," he told his nationwide audience. "Without adequate revenue, most of them would be abandoned or curtailed. That is why our tax proposal is the cornerstone of our whole effort."

FBI Captures Extortionist In California

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An FBI agent, made up to look like make-up manufacturer Max Factor Jr., helped trap an unemployed man accused of trying to extort $30,000 from Factor under threat of blasting him and his family with a time bomb.

Wendell Ringholz, 47, formerly of Cleveland and father of three children, was arrested yesterday as he picked up a dummy bundle of money in an orange grove in San Fernando Valley.

The arrest climaxed week-long negotiations by letter, telephone and a newspaper ad and marked the third time the package had been planted at spots designated by the would-be extortionist. The first two times he apparently had been frightened off.

Last Thursday night Factor, head of the cosmetics firm founded by his father, his wife Mildred and their son Donald, 19, left their Beverly Hills mansion after a man telephoned that a time bomb was hidden in the wall. Another son, Mark, 15, is in private school.

Yesterday Factor received a special delivery letter and a telephone call telling him to place the money on a white sheet he would find in a certain orange grove.

His impersonator drove Factor's sports car to the grove and the money was placed on the sheet. Several FBI agents were hidden in the area.

Minutes later, the FBI said, Ringholz walked into the grove and picked up the package. He was arrested immediately.

Agents quoted him as saying his family knew nothing of the plot, that he was deeply in debt.

Lower Voting Age Bill Progressing

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's proposal to lower the minimum voting age to 18 has finished the first lap of its journey through Congress.

It was approved 7-3 yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The voting age in all states but Georgia now is 21. Georgia already has lowered the minimum to 18.

step aside temporarily and let another senator preside as chairman of the subcommittee in the inquiries, but declared firmly he would fight for the right to sit in the hearings and participate in the questioning of witnesses.

Sen. Mundt (R-SD), the man McCarthy had picked to preside at the inquiry, earlier attempted to induce McCarthy to let some other committee take over. Mundt is a member of the subcommittee, second senior Republican to McCarthy.

"I STILL THINK the country would be best satisfied by having a neutral committee handle it," he said, adding that he wanted no hint of "whitewash."

But failing in that, he said he wanted the subcommittee hire a temporary, small special staff to handle the investigation, thus bypassing Cohn and other aides who are under the Army's fire.

The Army has accused both Cohn and Francis P. Carr, the subcommittee's staff chief through whom McCarthy handles personnel matters, of improper tactics. An Army report said Cohn used threats.

Mundt said it is "stretching credulity too far" to expect the American people to look on staffers under Carr's control to probe impartially into the conduct of their boss.

McCarthy yesterday flatly rejected broad hints from Senate GOP leadership and from within his own subcommittee that he call off a speaking tour and move for a swifter showdown on the issue.

Clearly counting on the Senate's unwritten code of senatorial courtesy to forestall any move to investigate a senator in his absence, he announced he would leave Wednesday noon on his four-day speaking tour, and added:

"I will be gone Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. There will be no hearing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday."

Columbus Fire Is Fatal To 2

COLUMBUS (AP)—A woman and her great granddaughter suffocated today in a blaze apparently started by an upset kerosene lamp.

The victims were Mrs. Addie Davis, 67, and Bessie Hairston, 12.

The fire was in a one-floor, frame rooming house adjoining an east side church. Damage to the house was relatively minor. The church was not damaged.

Four other persons escaped the house uninjured.

Change In Aid Law Is Sought

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Bender (R-Ohio) has asked Congress to pass a law allowing any American community to refuse federal aid money without affecting others.

A dispute between Harrison County and the State of Ohio apparently caused Bender's action. Harrison is the only Ohio county which has refused federal money for its disabled.

By law, all 88 Ohio counties must participate in the federal program if the state is to get aid.

2 A-Plant Aides Injured In Fire

CINCINNATI (AP)—Two men are in critical condition from burns received yesterday in a flash fire at the Fernald atomic plant near here.

Clarence L. Karl, manager, identified them as Byron Stephens, 21, Moores Hill, Ind., and Bert Dwenger, 45, Batesville, Ind.

Five other men were less seriously burned. No flammable material was involved in the fire, according to Karl. He said the fire resulted from an "accident" in a dry chemical unit and caused damage estimated at $2,000.

More Protests Voiced In Poll On Lake Issue

ment comes along and condemns it. "If they keep on they will have the size of our Pickaway County lake reduced to the size of a hog-wallow."

Winfield Koch, superintendent of the Pickaway County Children's Home which borders on the site of the proposed lake, said:

"A LAKE OF 50 acres isn't going to help the general water situation out here at all, and isn't going to help the water level in the wells."

"Naturally, the kids out here are disappointed and they can't understand why we can't have a decent size lake. They have read in the paper that the lake is going to be 160 acres, then they read that it is only going to be 50 acres. One youngster asked me the other day, 'Why do they lie about it? If we lie to anyone, you tell us it is wrong.'"

"It might be a little different if reducing the size of the lake to one-third meant the work could be done at one-third the cost of the larger lake. But we all know that is not true."

A Circleville attorney, Earl Smith, added his voice to the wave of protest.

"It is a darned shame something hasn't been done about it a long time ago," he said. "As has been pointed out previously, a 50-acre lake isn't going to reach back far enough to be fed by the channels in the area. I can't see the necessity of making the lake any smaller than was originally planned."

A. C. NOECKER, Ashville, is another bitter opponent to the plan.

"Whatever strong language you can use is all right with me," he declared. "Reducing the size of the lake is nothing but politics. Somebody wants to give the boot to Pickaway County and they live right in Columbus. They went to a lot of expense to build lakes at Logan and other places, why can't they go to some expense to build a good lake in this county?"

Algerians, German Foreign Legionnaires and Thai tribesmen.

THE FRENCH in Saigon predicted the Vietnam could not maintain their intense attacks of the past 48 hours longer than two more days. By that time, they said, the rebel troops and their supplies, the latter painfully trekked by coolies over the hundreds of jungle miles from Chinese dumps, would be exhausted.

Rainy weather, Vietnam anti-aircraft and rebel bombardment of Dien Bien Phu's air strips reduced the fort's airborne supply line to a minimum. But a number of C47 Dakotas still were able to land with medical supplies and take off for Hanoi with the worst of the wounded.

The hardest attack on the fortress, 175 miles west of Hanoi, came on its northern outpost. One section of the stronghold gave way Saturday night; late Monday night the balance of the defenders withdrew under the cover of forces sent from the center.

The rebels took the sector after one of the heaviest artillery poundings they have been able to mount so far in the long conflict.

French Union defenders bulked their striking power within the wire-bristling, bunkered heart of the fortress as the rebels threw wave after wave of yelling troops at the defenders.

The light rain turned the dusty plain into a sea of bloody mud as the American-supplied guns of the French worked like scythes, moving down the Vietnam.

World Today

By James Marlow
Associated Press
News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Lester B. Pearson, the Canadian foreign minister, and Adlai Stevenson, the Democrats' defeated candidate for president, both express concern about the Eisenhower administration's "new look."

That "new look" is the administration's plan for handling Communist attacks. What does it mean? That's getting less easy to answer. The President, Vice President Nixon, and Secretary of State Dulles have all talked about it.

Instead of clearing it up, they've clouded it up. Dulles announced it in a Jan. 12 speech. He said this government had decided, if the Communists attacked anywhere, then:

This country would depend "principally upon a great capacity to retaliate, instantly, by means and at places of our own choosing." He said this meant more security cheaper. Stevenson sarcastically called it "more bang for a buck."

The word "instantly" seems clear, or it did at the time. But a "great capacity to retaliate" could only mean the Air Force and the Navy with its air arm.

The Army is being cut down. Yesterday Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, said he was particularly concerned the "new look" plan might so weaken the Army it couldn't face up to Russia's growing military strength.

In practice, what would the "new look" mean? No one has explained that fully. Suppose the Chinese Communists attacked the French in Indochina. If American troops were sent into the jungles to help the French, it would mean the Chinese had chosen the place to fight, not the United States.

But Dulles said this country would do the choosing. Would his plan of instant retaliation mean, perhaps, ignoring the Indochina battlefield and bombing China itself? That might mean war with Russia too, and World War III.

But at his news conference last Wednesday President Eisenhower said this country would never get involved in World War III without a formal declaration of war by Congress. That couldn't be done instantly.

Suppose the Chinese attacked Indochina and Eisenhower wanted to retaliate by attacking China but first referred the question to Congress? There'd be long debate before a step was taken that might mean world war.

What happens then to Dulles' talk about retaliating "instantly"? Nixon, in a nationwide broadcast last Saturday night in answer to questions by Stevenson in a broadcast the previous Saturday night, explained:

"We decided we would not fall into... traps. And so we adopted a new plan, and that new plan, summed up, is this: rather than let the Communists nibble us to death all over the world in little wars, we would rely in the future primarily on our massive, mobile, retaliatory power which we could use at our own discretion against the major sources of aggression at times and places that we can choose."

This was approximately what Dulles had said. But in his speech Nixon repeatedly complained that while communism made gains during President Truman's term, "not a single Russian soldier was lost."

What would he do, for instance, to make the Russians pay in soldiers in their own back yard? He couldn't suggest attacking Russia unless he wanted World War III. Would Congress consent to that? Yet, Eisenhower said this country would not get into such a war without congressional approval.

And if Russia saw Congress debating about an attack on her, would she wait patiently to be attacked? Hardly. And if Russia attacked, she might try to bomb American cities but would almost certainly bomb the cities of American allies in Europe. So American allies have a stake in the "new look."

Pearson made that clear yesterday. He said Canada and the Western Allies must be consulted fully before the United States makes any decision to "retaliate instantly" against an aggressor.

Stevenson not only raised questions about the "new look" in general but about something else Dulles said in his Jan. 12 speech. Dulles had talked about putting more reliance on "deterrent power,

Ashville Slates Class Play-Offs

The Ashville seniors will meet the sophomores in class basketball playoffs Tuesday night in the Ashville High School gymnasium. And the junior girls will meet the senior girls in their play-off, also scheduled for Tuesday night.

The games follow preliminary eliminations which were held between the classes Monday night. In the boys division the scores were: Seniors 30, freshmen 26; and sophomores 35, juniors 29. In the girls' division the scores were: juniors 15, sophomores 13; seniors 44, freshmen 40.

er, and less on local defensive power."

"Is this," Stevenson said, "a 'new look' or is it a return to the pre-1950 deterrent strategy which made some sense as long as we had a monopoly of atomic weapons together with a strategic air force?"

Last year the administration cut the Air Force, this year started to build it up again. The most recent statement on the "new look" comes from Adm. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who says it means the enemy is being told that if he attacks one place, this country might slam him some place else but not necessarily with atomic weapons. This doesn't add much to public understanding.

Tiny Baby Delays Cruise Ship Then Fascinates Passengers

By HAL BOYLE

AT SEA — A baby girl is almost as rare on a pleasure cruise as a baby elephant.

When my wife booked passage for three on an 18-day voyage to the West Indies and South America, the liner's agents were perturbed to learn that the third member of the family was our 8-month-old daughter, Tracy.

"We are well set up to care for infants on our transatlantic voyages," they said. "But, frankly, we don't encourage the taking of infants on a long tropical pleasure cruise, and it is rather... um... um... unusual to say the least."

This upset us. My wife, Frances, had looked forward to this cruise for years—as a kind of a late honeymoon to take the place of the one we couldn't afford when we were first married. But Tracy had come as a late surprise in our lives, too, and we would have turned our backs on 18 days in paradise if it meant leaving her behind.

"Why, they forget so quickly at that age," said Frances. "Tracy probably wouldn't know us when we returned, if we went on the cruise without her, and that would break my heart."

When we told the ship line officials we either had to sail as a family trinity or forget my wife's long dream of a cruise, they relented. They said Tracy could come along if she agreed not to eat her baby-sized life preserver or try to enter any gin rummy tournaments in the lounge.

Tracy embarked with the fanfare of a movie queen, minus the dark glasses. There were seven native diaper bearers in her entourage.

Children don't get seasick until the age of 2, so Tracy, who can't walk and refuses to crawl, was one of the first passengers to get her sea legs. She fell asleep on her stomach while friends were telling her "bon voyage."

That night at a gathering to meet the ship officers, the chief steward said:

"Did you notice we were several minutes late in sailing this morning? Do you know why? We were held up waiting for a case of baby food for your daughter to get aboard."

I suppose all proud parents are told this as a joke—that the ship's departure was delayed to get their baby's food aboard—but when I tell Tracy about this some years from now I'm going to treat it as gospel truth.

"When you were 8 months old you kept a 35,000-ton liner and 1,300 people waiting," I'll tell her. "Now don't you think it's about time to learn to be prompt?"

No one has gotten more out of the cruise than Tracy. The crew couldn't have pampered her more if she had been the daughter of the line's board chairman. Our room steward, Jack Barnes, a father himself, treats her as if she were his own.

Babies hate a change of routine as much as grownups do. They're really very conservative. But Tracy adjusted to shipboard life within a day. We were afraid to take her ashore at any of the ports, but she didn't mind. She has had a high time in her crib or on deck flirting with Barnes and learning to play patty-cake with the young stewardess, Miss Heather Butler, who has a heart for children.

Tracy, after patty-caking her hands nearly raw, has learned to speak with a British accent. Her first word was "cool," which, as everybody knows, is a Cockney expression of wonder or surprise.

Everything brings a "cool" from her—flapping gulls, a sudden breeze, the foam in the ship's wake, or the passengers who stop to chat with her. They have been wonderful to her, for she is the only baby between here and land.

"Doesn't she look exactly like her father!" exclaimed one of two women who passed us on deck. My pride-expanded chest collapsed when, as they strolled on, the wind blew back the remark of the second woman—"but she'll probably outgrow it."

Another woman stopped many times to play with Tracy. Once she turned away suddenly with wet eyes. Later I learned she had lost a daughter of her own, and I felt how often in this world our personal happiness is but a small island washed by the seas of others' sadness.

Tracy will end this unremembered first voyage of her life with at least two distinctions. Capt. A. B. Fasting had her as one of his guests at a party in his

Clothing Bill Brings Troubles

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Rudolph Smith sued a clothing concern for $3,000. He claimed that after he paid a 12-cent down payment on a shirt he was notified by the store that he owed $45.19 balance, not $5.98 as he thought.

Smith's petition said the additional $39.21 tacked onto his bill actually was owed by his sister.

He said he suffered "humiliation, embarrassment, anxiety, worry of mind, and mental anguish" when the clothing concern wrote to his employers complaining he had failed to pay a debt.

As for the other distinction, Tracy sailed with only four teeth but will end the cruise with five. No other passenger can make this claim.

'Untouchables' Win New Rights

NEW DELHI (AP)—India may put fresh teeth into her constitutional ban on the creed of untouchability.

The lower house of parliament has accepted for consideration a bill providing up to six months in jail and a fine up to $105 for persons who excommunicate or otherwise injure those who once were outcasts.

The bill provides that courts may order cancellation or suspension of government grants of land, money or other facilities to any church, temple, hospital, school or hotel which refuses to admit an "untouchable."

Mom Shows How, Gets Surprise

CHICOPEE, Mass. (AP)—Mrs. Rene Cote took her son Armand to a doctor's office for a tonsil checkup.

When Armand balked at letting the doctor look down his throat, his mother said, "Look, dear, it's easy," and opened her mouth wide.

The doctor took a look at Mrs. Cote's throat and said: "Hmmm, you'll have to have your tonsils out too."

By James Marlow
Associated Press
News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lester B. Pearson, the Canadian foreign minister, and Adlai Stevenson, the Democrats' defeated candidate for president, both express concern about the Eisenhower administration's "new look."

That "new look" is the administration's plan for handling Communist attacks. What does it mean? That's getting less easy to answer. The President, Vice President Nixon, and Secretary of State Dulles have all talked about it.

Instead of clearing it up, they've clouded it up. Dulles announced it in a Jan. 12 speech. He said this government had decided, if the Communists attacked anywhere, then:

"This country would depend 'principally upon a great capacity to retaliate, instantly, by means and at places of our own choosing.'"

He said this meant more security. Stevenson sarcastically called it "more bang for a buck."

The word "instantly" seems clear, or it did at the time. But a "great capacity to retaliate" could only mean the Air Force and the Navy with its air arm.

The Army is being cut down. Yesterday Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, Army chief of staff, said he was particularly concerned the "new look" plan might so weaken the Army it couldn't face up to Russia's growing military strength.

In practice, what would the "new look" mean? No one has explained that fully. Suppose the Chinese Communists attacked the French in Indochina. If American troops were sent into the jungles to help the French, it would mean the Chinese had chosen the place to fight, not the United States.

But Dulles said this country would do the choosing. Would his plan of instant retaliation mean, perhaps, ignoring the Indochina Battlefield and bombing China itself? That might mean war with Russia too, and World War III.

But at his news conference last Wednesday President Eisenhower said this country would never get involved in World War III without a formal declaration of war by Congress. That couldn't be done instantly.

Suppose the Chinese attacked Indochina and Eisenhower wanted to retaliate by attacking China but first referred the question to Congress? There'd be long debate before a step was taken that might mean world war.

What happens then to Dulles' talk about retaliating "instantly"? Nixon, in a nationwide broadcast last Saturday night in answer to questions by Stevenson in a broadcast the previous Saturday night, explained:

"We decided we would not fall into . . . traps. And so we adopted a new plan, and that new plan, summed up, is this: rather than let the Communists nibble us to death all over the world in little wars, we would rely in the future primarily on our massive, mobile, retaliatory power which we could use at our own discretion against the major sources of aggression at times and places that we can choose."

This was approximately what Dulles had said. But in his speech Nixon repeatedly complained that while communism made gains during President Truman's term, "not a single Russian soldier was lost."

What would he do, for instance, to make the Russians pay in soldiers in their own back yard? He couldn't suggest attacking Russia unless he wanted World War III. Would Congress consent to that? Yet, Eisenhower said this country would not get into such a war without congressional approval.

And if Russia saw Congress debating about an attack on her, would she wait patiently to be attacked? Hardly. And if Russia attacked, she might try to bomb American cities but would almost certainly bomb the cities of American allies in Europe. So American allies have a stake in the "new look."

Pearson made that clear yesterday. He said Canada and the Western Allies must be consulted fully before the United States makes any decision to "retaliate instantly" against an aggressor.

Stevenson not only raised questions about the "new look" in general but about something else Dulles said in his Jan. 12 speech. Dulles had talked about putting more reliance on "deterrent pow-

Ashville Slates Class Play-Offs

The Ashville seniors will meet the sophomores in class basketball playoffs Tuesday night in the Ashville High School gymnasium. And the junior girls will meet the senior girls in their play-off, also scheduled for Tuesday night.

The games follow preliminary eliminations which were held between the classes Monday night. In the boys division the scores were: Seniors 30, freshmen 26; and sophomores 35, juniors 29. In the girls' division the scores were: juniors 15, sophomores 13; seniors 44, freshmen 40.

er, and less on local defensive power."

"Is this," Stevenson said, "a 'new look' or is it a return to the pre-1950 deterrent strategy which made some sense as long as we had a monopoly of atomic weapons together with a strategic air force?"

Last year the administration cut the Air Force, this year started to build it up again. The most recent statement on the "new look" comes from Adm. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who says it means the enemy is being told that if he attacks one place, this country might slam him some place else but not necessarily with atomic weapons. This doesn't add much to public understanding.

What happens then to Dulles' talk about retaliating "instantly"? Nixon, in a nationwide broadcast last Saturday night in answer to questions by Stevenson in a broadcast the previous Saturday night, explained:

NEW-OLD APPROACH

IN BRITAIN, where the postwar years have witnessed an increase in the rate and seriousness of juvenile delinquency comparable to that in this country, the attack on the problem is in sharp contrast to the usual treatment in this country.

Whereas, it is the American custom to make excuses for the wayward boy, blame his misdemeanors on parental indifference and attempt to straighten him out by giving him the feeling that somebody cares, the British are inclined to the theory that the majority of juvenile delinquents are suffering from inflation of the ego and a disregard of what constitutes acceptable behavior.

Viewing the problem in that light, they would hardly be realistic if they attempted to solve it in terms of either more playgrounds or sterner punishments.

Instead, they have set up a type of detention center called Campfield House, where, after a court hearing, the delinquents are given from one to three months of iron discipline. It operates much as does a military school, only more so. From sunrise until lights out at 9 p. m., the subject is held to a rigid schedule of work and exercise. Whatever the activity, there is insistence that the job be done right, if the youth expects ultimately to be discharged from the institution.

The British seemingly have learned to teach the delinquent the thing he needs most to know. If so, it would be a useful item of export.

SWITCHING TO TEA

MORE AMERICANS are drinking tea, according to an official of a large retail food chain. Sales throughout the country have increased 20 per cent since the uproar over soaring coffee prices started. A movement of this kind could catch on and, as in the case of margarine, sales of which are up 1,000 per cent in 10 years, result in a permanent change in the American economy.

Back in Revolutionary War times this was a nation of tea drinkers. A tax on tea assumed monumental proportions because tea was the accepted table beverage.

The more probable effect of a switch to tea, if it continues to gain momentum, will be a lowering of coffee prices. If enough people drink tea instead of coffee, obviously the coffee shortage may become a surplus.

At its present top price, coffee does not show a larger increase over the last 50 years than meat, for instance. But it is the little things that irk a housewife. Coffee is a small item in the food budget, and housewives seem to be determined to keep it small.

These Days

It came to me, when I had to go to Florida for a speech, that I might see the world as a tourist does, riding a car, stopping to see the sights, eating wherever I could, wearing an exciting open-collared green shirt with black squares.

City folks rarely realize how many thousands of men and women have the time and the money to wander about the country seeing things. It must be the result of vacations with pay or the pensions that come at the early age of 55. At any rate, they all seem to have jingle money, not too much but enough to pull away from home and just wander.

Being a tourist is great fun because the world is full of novelties, if only one forgets how old he is. For instance, I had never been in a glass-bottomed boat, viewing the floor of a lake of crystal clear water. At Silver Springs, I saw great schools of catfish playing in the vegetation which was so different from anything I had seen before.

Then I went to Ross Allen's Reptile Institute to see a snake get milked. I think it was a diamond-back-rattlesnake and an angry devil he was. Too many of us think that we know everything because we know the little world in which we work. I, for instance, have an acquaintance with many so-called great men and if, at times, I sound pessimistic or even cynical, it is because the great prove to be so small.

Ross Allen knows snakes and alligators and such creatures and he can milk a snake, which no United States Senator or general in the Army can do. And it is an exciting experience because while the snake wants to kill Allen, all Allen wants is the venom, which he sells for a profit to drug houses.

So, in due course, I wandered down to Cypress Gardens, which has been developed by an ex-press agent and real estate operator, Richard Downing Pope, into one of the most beautiful gardens on Earth. Thousands come to see the aquatic sports there, but they held no lure for me. The flowers and trees and climbing vines, the beautiful vistas, the great ferns and the background of cypresses—these held me for hours and I envied the man who could spend his life among them. This park must never be lost, even if jingle money grows scarce.

So we wandered on to the Bok Tower, a gem of architecture, so reminiscent, not in design, but in concept, of the Taj Mahal. I do not know what impelled the truly great publisher and editor, Edward Bok, to erect this tower and lay out the grounds. The tower with its fine carillon, consisting of 71 bells, provides a delightful interlude in a troubled world.

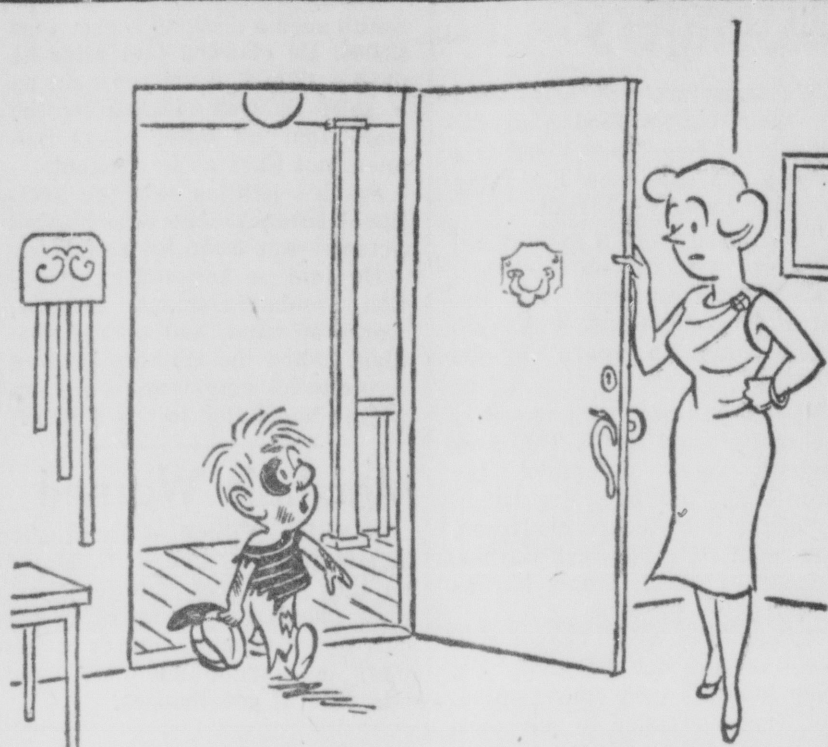

All the time I was there, I could not help wonder why the Bok Memorial is called the "Mountain Lake Sanctuary and Singing Tower." What about Bok? Is he forgotten? It makes one humble to stand before beauty; it makes one more humble to realize how quickly the author of beauty is forgotten.

Severe Burns Should Be Given Prompt Care by a Physician

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

NO home remedy can equal the help that expert first aid gives in the case of burns. All serious burns require the careful attention of a physician. However, many times a person may be called on to give first aid to the burn victim and there are certain vital points in regard to this treatment.

Any severe burn case should be hospitalized and under the care of a licensed physician as soon as possible. However, if this is not possible, all clothing and constrictive jewelry should be removed unless it is stuck to the burned surface. The burned skin should be covered with a clean sheet and should then not be disturbed.

It has been found that the application of oils, ointments or even butter will not relieve pain or aid in wound healing. These things may even be harmful, since such materials must be removed at the time when the physician dresses the wound.

Minor Burns Painful

Minor burns are very painful while second and third degree burns give little pain. A physician is the best judge of how much of a pain relieving drug is necessary in the case of severe burns. He will best be able to control the restlessness that accompanies severe burns with proper medication. He also will administer penicillin or other antibiotic to control infection and tetanus.

serum if he thinks they are required, as they often are in severe burns. He may also recommend blood transfusions to combat shock, which is an accompaniment of severe burns.

Despite the patient's request for water, fluids should be given with extreme caution in first aid treatment. Excessive amounts of fluids in the burned individual may lead to persistent nausea and vomiting. Also, there is a danger of increasing the amount of fluid in the system, which in turn may cause a condition known as water intoxication.

If the patient must have fluids before a physician arrives, a solution of one level tablespoon of salt and one teaspoon of baking soda to a quart of cold water should be made. The amount consumed of even this fluid should be very small until the person can be placed under the expert guidance of a physician.

QUESTION AND ANSWER
Mr. W. E.: Can the hormones ACTH and cortisone be harmful if used for a prolonged period of time?

Answer: These drugs should be taken only under the direction of a physician for, if taken for a prolonged period of time, the use of these hormones can produce severe symptoms. A person can develop a swelling of the body, a mild form of diabetes, excessive growth of hair or loss of hair due to the indiscriminate use of these hormones.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

MYRA came back into the room from the hall where the telephone and her record book were on the side table. "You think it might be neighborly, like, to run across the street and..." she began.

"No!" said Ike, not looking up from the little book in his big hands. "Shelly neither?"

"No!" said Ike again. "Myra subsided. 'I should purely like to hear what Dr. Talbot says and does...'"

"You could go stand under the window," said Ike sarcastically. "Beats me. You couldn't get out of that house fast enough. Now you want to go back..."

"I admire Dr. Talbot, especially when he's upset," said Myra.

"I'm glad you didn't warn the man of what he was getting into," growled Ike.

"Oh, that's not part of the exchange's services. But I didn't need to, anyway. He'll know five seconds after he gets in there."

"I see his car lights..." announced Shelly.

Ike gave each young woman a stern look. They laughed, and settled back with their own reading material.

It had been decided to level a small, regular charge against the doctors to pay for the exchange service. The time would come when Ike's work would move him on, and the girl who would then take over for Myra must be paid.

That she was being paid made it difficult for Shelly to persuade Myra to take an evening off now and then. "I can do my trapezins in the daytime!"

"You don't trapeze with Ike, then," Shelly pointed out.

Myra glanced at the big, blond man. "You honin' to trapeze anywhere, honey?" she asked softly.

Ike grinned. "One night a week, maybe," he helped Shelly.

"And don't worry about the calls," Shelly assured the girl. "I won't get things balled up."

It was from one of the "trapezins" expeditions that Myra brought back word of seeing Craig with a girl, and such a girl! "I 'bout had to tie my handkerchief over Ike's eyes," she claimed.

"Do you know who she was?"

"No. She was quality, I think. If not, she's been kept right hand-some."

Shelly frowned.

"Dark, she was," Myra added. "Hair long to her shoulders, and combed out that pretty way I never could manage. Jest enough curl—She had on a green dress, and if the night hadn't been warm, she'd been riskin' pneumonia. It in no way offered protection to that girl's chest."

Shelly laughed.

"She was right pretty," Myra mused. "Those sort of slinky, dark eyes. She didn't seem to talk much, but her sort don't need to."

Shelly frowned. Eleanor? Yes. Probably.

And in a day or two, she herself saw Craig and Eleanor together. In his car...

Well, if he couldn't do better... What right had Shelly to be jealous? She had her own husband. Didn't she?

As far as the office went, he could spare a little time for early summer dalliance.

No, it was not her affair. Except...

In her "organization" of the office, Shelly came up against the truth as forcefully as if she had run, full speed, against a brick wall. Beginning with her firm, unannounced reestablishment of the two waiting rooms, she had gone on to organize the patients who came to sit in those rooms, arranging them according to the claims they had upon the doctor's time and attention.

Again, she was given her plan by one of the many excellent books put out by the various drug companies. This article had been titled, "Who Gets to See the Doctor?"

Shelly had read it with interest, and considered it in reference to Stephen's office and his patients. Yes, it seemed a good plan, and if Craig did not object...

He did not. On his return to his practice after the accident he seemed a bit—well, not chastened—but he didn't point out Shelly's inexperience so often, nor talk to her at all about dolls.

So she organized his visitors into priority classifications. First came his regular patients with appointments—this would include newcomers to town who might become regular patients. Second, his regular patients who came to the office without appointments. Third, patients who had been going to other doctors, and now would try Dr. Talbot. Emergencies, of course, came in where they occurred and according to their urgency. Next in line were the "detail" man, the legitimate salesmen of drugs and apparatus, and so on. After them, the salesmen who were not to be classified as legitimate—this covered a varied field, neckties, cigarettes, real estate...

...and last to get in should be such family members and friends as might drop into the office for a visit.

Here Shelly took what comfort she could in making Eleanor Walsh wait till the very last.

And it was here, too, that she ran into the brick wall. Because, one day, there was no one in the left-hand waiting room except Eleanor. The Reverend Prewett had been there earlier; he was going to have to undergo surgery for his ulcer; Craig had attended to him, and to those patients connected with his plant services, and Shelly could find no reason not to let Eleanor go into the doctor's consultation room.

She shrugged. "Business couldn't be worse," he said cheerfully.

"I didn't realize how much it had fallen off, until today."

He reached for a printed form which lay on her desk. "It sometimes takes a doctor a couple of years to recover from as bad a case of gossip as I had, Shelly."

He spoke calmly, seeming more interested in the paper he held.

But Shelly was shocked to her heels. "You don't mean—" She glanced at her. And rubbed his hand back over his hair. "Sure. Half the town still talks about my being drunk and letting people die. The other half listens. Nobody wants to risk his life in my hands."

She could not speak. She leaned back in her chair and stared, white-faced, at him. "But—"

"I know," he said quietly. "The truth was established. The truth never makes as good a story to tell and repeat. But gradually it will be told. It will take time, of course."

"And, meanwhile?"

His face was stern. "Meanwhile, I've lost most of Stephen's practice!" he said harshly. "Shelly, I'm sorry about that. I—I knew any way to change that!—but even my moving out wouldn't help that situation. Nothing will help it. Patients don't come to a doctor they can't trust."

news behind the news

WASHINGTON — High Administration officials have brought far greater pressure against Sen. Walter F. George's exemption-raising and politically popular proposal than they did against his plan to amend the Constitution so as to limit the President's authority over foreign affairs. They regard this Democratic maneuver as the "key struggle" in the great debate over the Eisenhower-Humphrey taxation program.

Spearheading the opposition's demand for more generous relief to low-income groups, the George alternative would upset all carefully laid plans for balancing the budget in the 1956 fiscal year. It would, in Treasury opinion, prevent the expansion of industry necessary to provide new jobs for a constantly increasing labor force. It would, they believe, relieve the few at the expense of the many.

RESULTS — Boosting the exemptions by only $100, from the present $600 to $700, would reduce government income by almost $3 billion, doubling the expected deficit for fiscal 1955. It would remove four million from the tax rolls.

Senator George's maximum exemption figure of $1,000 would deprive the Treasury of about $6 billion, with a resultant deficit of between $8 and $9 billion. It would permit 15 million to escape payment of any federal taxes.

Secretary Humphrey regards the reduction of the number of taxpayers as an extremely disadvantageous step. Like so many of his predecessors, even Roosevelt-Truman financiers, he believes that the more people liable to taxes, the more people there will be with a deep and personal concern in federal finances, and especially economy.

A numerically large tax roll enlarges and intensifies the popular pressure on Congress and the Executive for prudent management of their money. That is regarded as axiomatic at the Treasury.

TACTICS — President Eisenhower will veto any measure reducing excise taxes by $1 billion if it reaches him with the George scheme attached as an amendment. But the Georgian, a shrewd parliamentarian, will probably affix his exemption relief suggestion to the 900-page measure which overhauls the federal tax structure for the first time since the Civil War.

It will be virtually impossible for the President to disapprove Senator George's idea if it is submitted in this camouflaged form. The chief executive cannot veto a bill in piecemeal fashion. He must accept or reject it in its entirety, a procedure so unwieldy and impractical that its abolition has been demanded by every Eisenhower predecessor.

Even though the Senate has a Democratic majority of one, it is in that body that the White House looks for victory. A few Republicans may desert Eisenhower, especially those up for re-election next fall. But it is expected that several conservative and money-minded Democrats will refuse to follow the Georgia veteran, even though he is the party's taxation authority.

RESTRAINT — The White House argument in this great tax debate is that exercise of restraint now will pay tax relief dividends within the next few years, possibly a 10 to 20 per cent cut in individual income taxes and a 10 per cent reduction in corporate payments. That is the carrot to be dangled before Congress.

Despite Administration opposition to excessive reductions at this season, Eisenhower's advisers concede the need for leaving a much larger percentage of earnings to individuals and corporations. Otherwise, there will be no reserves for the two operations which alone can sustain our expanding economic system—industrial investments to enlarge the production plant and sufficient purchasing power to buy the national output of durable and consumer goods.

Recent investment innovations place the individual taxpayer in a preferred position for eventual large-scale relief. Increasingly, as Humphrey realizes, it is the

NEW-OLD APPROACH

IN BRITAIN, where the postwar years have witnessed an increase in the rate and seriousness of juvenile delinquency comparable to that in this country, the attack on the problem is in sharp contrast to the usual treatment in this country.

Whereas, it is the American custom to make excuses for the wayward boy, blame his misdemeanors on parental indifference and attempt to straighten him out by giving him the feeling that somebody cares, the British are inclined to the theory that the majority of juvenile delinquents are suffering from inflation of the ego and a disregard of what constitutes acceptable behavior.

Viewing the problem in that light, they would hardly be realistic if they attempted to solve it in terms of either more playgrounds or sterner punishments.

Instead, they have set up a type of detention center called Campfield House, where, after a court hearing, the delinquents are given from one to three months of iron discipline. It operates much as does a military school, only more so. From sunrise until lights out at 9 p. m., the subject is held to a rigid schedule of work and exercise. Whatever the activity, there is insistence that the job be done right, if the youth expects ultimately to be discharged from the institution.

The British seemingly have learned to teach the delinquent the thing he needs most to know. If so, it would be a useful item of export.

SWITCHING TO TEA

MORE AMERICANS are drinking tea, according to an official of a large retail food chain. Sales throughout the country have increased 20 per cent since the uproar over soaring coffee prices started. A movement of this kind could catch on and, as in the case of margarine, sales of which are up 1,000 per cent in 10 years, result in a permanent change in the American economy.

Back in Revolutionary War times this was a nation of tea drinkers. A tax on tea assumed monumental proportions because tea was the accepted table beverage.

The more probable effect of a switch to tea, if it continues to gain momentum, will be a lowering of coffee prices. If enough people drink tea instead of coffee, obviously the coffee shortage may become a surplus.

At its present top price, coffee does not show a larger increase over the last 50 years than meat, for instance. But it is the little things that irk a housewife. Coffee is a small item in the food budget, and housewives seem to be determined to keep it small.

"Shelly neither?"

"No!" said Ike again.

Myra subsided. "I should purely like to hear what Dr. Talbot says and does..."

"You could go stand under the window," said Ike sarcastically. "Beats me. You couldn't get out of that house fast enough. Now you want to go back..."

"I admire Dr. Talbot, especially when he's upset," said Myra. "I'm glad you didn't warn the man of what he was getting into," growled Ike.

"Oh, that's not part of the exchange's services. But I didn't need to, anyway. He'll know five seconds after he gets in there."

"I see his car lights..." announced Shelly.

Ike gave each young woman a stern look. They laughed, and settled back with their own reading material.

It had been decided to level a small, regular charge against the doctors to pay for the exchange service. The time would come when Ike's work would move him on, and the girl who would then take over for Myra must be paid.

That she was being paid made it difficult for Shelly to persuade Myra to take an evening off now and then. "I can do my trapeze in the daytime!"

"You don't trapeze with Ike, then," Shelly pointed out.

Myra glanced at the big, blond man. "You nonin' to trapeze anywhere, money?" she asked softly.

Ike grinned. "One night a week, maybe," he helped Shelly.

"And don't worry about the calls," Shelly assured the girl. "I won't get things balled up."

It was from one of the "trapeze" expeditions that Myra brought back word of seeing Craig with a girl. And such a girl! "I bout had to tie my handkerchief over Ike's eyes," she claimed.

"Do you know who she was?"

"No. She was quality, I think. If not, she's been kept right handsome."

Shelly frowned.

"Dark, she was," Myra added. "Hair long to her shoulders, and combed out that pretty way I never could manage. Just enough curl—she had on a green dress, and if the night hadn't been warm, she'd been riskin' pneumonia. It in no way offered protection to that girl's chest."

Shelly laughed.

"She was right pretty," Myra mused. "Those sort of slinky, dark eyes. She didn't seem to talk much, but her sort don't need to."

Try, Stop Me

John Crosby reports on a farmer named Fleming, not far from Toronto, who installed a television set in his barn and says that the cows are infinitely more contented—and produce an additional fifteen gallons of milk every day! The cows, adds the farmer, seem to prefer Arthur Godfrey and Eddie Cantor, but begin mooing madly the moment a commercial begins...

Crosby knows also of a cat who's in seventh heaven when John Daly gives a newscast or moderates a panel show. However, the cat snarled for an hour straight the other day. Its owner had tuned in the Westminster Kennel Club finals.

Shelly frowned. Eleanor? Yes. Probably.

And in a day or two, she herself saw Craig and Eleanor together. In his car...

Well, if he couldn't do better... What right had Shelly to be jealous? She had her own husband. Didn't she?

As far as the office went, he could spare a little time for early summer dalliance.

No, it was not her affair.

Except...

In her "organization" of the office, Shelly came up against the truth as forcefully as if she had run, full speed, against a brick wall. Beginning with her firm, unannounced reestablishment of the two waiting rooms, she had gone on to organize the patients who came to sit in those rooms, arranging them according to the claims they had upon the doctor's time and attention.

Again, she was given her plan by one of the many excellent books put out by the various drug companies. This article had been titled, "Who Gets to See the Doctor?"

Shelly had read it with interest, and considered it in reference to Stephen's office and his patients. Yes, it seemed a good plan, and if Craig did not object...

He did not. On his return to his practice after the accident he seemed a bit—well, not chastened—but he didn't point out Shelly's inexperience so often, nor talk to her at all about dolls.

So she organized his visitors into priority classifications. First came his regular patients with appointments—this would include newcomers to town who might become regular patients. Second, his regular patients who came to the office without appointments. Third, patients who had been going to other doctors, and now would try Dr. Talbot. Emergencies, of course, came in where they occurred and according to their urgency. Next in line were the "detail" man, the legitimate salesman of drugs and apparatus, and so on. After them, the salesmen who were not to be classified as legitimate—this covered a varied field, neckties, cigarettes, real estate... and last to get in should be such family members and friends as might drop into the office for a visit.

Here Shelly took what comfort she could in making Eleanor Walsh wait till the very last.

And it was here, too, that she ran into the brick wall. Because, one day, there was no one in the left-hand waiting room except Eleanor. The Reverend Prewett had been there earlier; he was going to have to undergo surgery for his ulcer; Craig had attended to him, and to those patients connected with his plant services, and Shelly could find no reason not to let Eleanor go into the doctor's consultation room.

She could only sit at the receptionist's desk, smell tobacco smoke, listen to the muted murmur of voices and the occasional laughter. No excuse to interrupt offered itself. No phone calls, no emergency; no patients arrived. She looked down at the appointment book, turned the pages and sat frowning.

What was going on? She looked out through the window at the rain which fell like dull silver. It fell in ribbons, and then in chains of little silver beads and small crystal balls. As it hit the ground, it made a sound like tiny bits of broken glass. Shelly sighed, and leaned her head against her hand.

Finally, Eleanor left; Craig escorted her to her car, and then came back to stand looking down at his blonde receptionist. "Something wrong?" he asked.

"Of course not." She sat quietly erect.

He sat down in one of the chairs, bounced it upon its steel frame, and then leaned back. "I thought maybe you had a headache..."

Shelly cleared her throat self-consciously. "Was Miss Walsh's a professional call?" she asked coldly.

Designers Frustrate Kids, So Says Blonde Toy Tycoon

By DOROTHY ROE

Associated Press Women's Editor

It's no wonder psychologists are doing a land-office business these days, says Kay Stanley, Chicago toy tycoon — toy designers have been busy frustrating children for generations.

The tall, attractive, milk-coated blonde is the girl who first thought up those toy cooking sets with miniature packages of brand-name groceries in them. Kay is still shuddering from the shock she got when she examined some earlier sets which contained dummy empty packages. Says she:

"Can you imagine the frustration of a child who gets a toy grocery store set and finds that all the packages are empty? A package that says raisins on the outside ought to have raisins inside—that's surely not too much for a child to expect."

"It's a wonder children ever grew up to trust anything, after all those cruel tricks the toy makers used to play on them."

Kay has been in the toy business 12 years, with a cake-baking set which has sold millions, because it offers real cake mixes and an assortment of frosting which enable the small cook to turn out real cakes. She explains her theories thus:

"Every toy I have made gives the child a chance to make something he can be proud of. I have no use for the theory that anything that keeps a child occupied and out of his parents' hair is a good toy. If he can't accomplish something with it, he's bound to be frustrated."

"Look how many generations of children have been making mud pies, for goodness sake! And what good is a mud pie? The child can't eat it. He can't even bring it in the house. It's just a method of killing time."

"I decided girls and boys ought to be able to make real cakes and pies that they can show off to the family and then can really eat. Pies and cakes that taste yummy and look terrific. Then they have a sense of achievement when they get through."

Kay started out with a rubber modeling set containing molds of various animals which a child could make. She progressed to the cake-baking set, and now is turning out a number of variations of the original idea. The newest is a chocolate molding set with which a child can make his own chocolate bunnies, chickens and such. She expects to do a big business in these around Easter.

Eddie Joust Hikes His A's In Standings

MIAMI (AP)—Rookie Manager Eddie Joust, who played under two of baseball's most brilliant tacticians, Connie Mack and Casey Stengel, had his surprising Philadelphia Athletics on top of the exhibition standings today.

The Athletics, rumored to be in a bad way financially, have won six straight games without a loss. The Baltimore Orioles have the next best record, 8-2, followed by the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-2, the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6-3, and the St. Louis Cardinals, 5-3.

"Our new men will have to come through if we're to make a good showing," is Joust's analysis of his team's chances in the regular season.

Three of the new men, Don Bollweaver, obtained from the New York Yankees, and rookies Tommy Giordano and Lou Limmer slammed home runs yesterday as the Athletics defeated the Boston Red Sox 10-7. Veterans Gus Zernial and Ray Murray also homered.

Nevertheless, the new skipper has his work cut out for him. His club, which finished in seventh place in 1953, 41½ games behind the Yankees, played before only 362,113 fans, a drop of more than 250,000 from the previous year.

Eddie Joust Hikes His A's In Standings

MIAMI (P)—Rookie Manager Eddie Joust, who played under two of baseball's most brilliant tacticians, Connie Mack and Casey Stengel, had his surprising Philadelphia Athletics on top of the exhibition standings today.

The Athletics, rumored to be in a bad way financially, have won six straight games without a loss.

Coaches Said Uneasy About Current Cage Rulings

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio's basketball coaches — both high school and college — aren't too satisfied with the present rules.

Of 137 mentors answering an Associated Press questionnaire, only nine gave an unqualified "yes" to the question "Do you like the game as now played?"

Sixty-nine others said they like the current plan of play, but offered suggestions for rule changes. Forty were definitely against the fire engine, many foul trend, while 19 opined the present code was "not too bad" but could stand some changes.

The controversial one-and-one free throw regulation was the target of the majority of gripes, 71 — or more than half the total — declaring it should be erased from the books.

Suggested changes, many of which probably will be suggested at the annual meeting of the Ohio High School Basketball Coaches Assn. meeting in Cleveland in connection with the March 26-27 state tournament, covered a wide range.

A break for the defense was asked by 15 coaches, and 13 others suggested that the charging-blocking rule be changed to penalize the boy with the ball, at least part of the time, for running into a defender.

The officials came in for their usual bit of criticism, too. Five coaches urged mandatory attendance of officials at schools to assure more uniform handling of contests; 3 urged a breaking up of the "monopoly of old officials," 3 insisted there is too much whistle tooting, another said the officials had too much power, and 3 said flatly "the officiating is lousy."

Most of the suggested changes centered around fouls and free throws. Seven coaches want defensive players given both inside spots on free throws, 10 want the free throw lane widened to give the smaller players a chance, 3 would ignore fouls having no bearing on the play, 12 want the 3-minute rule abolished, 6 want 2 fouls called for back court infractions, and 5 want more severe penalties for intentional fouls.

Two favor a 4-fouls-and-out rule to force better defensive coaching, 1 wants a limit of 6 fouls, and 3 would allow a boy to stay in the game after 5 fouls, with the opposition retaining the ball after the free throw. Ten others would let the fouled team take the ball out of bounds instead of trying the free throw.

Other suggestions were: Slow down the game, 4; adopt the full professional code, 2; outlaw the zone defense, 1; outlaw stalling, 3; do not require offending player to raise hand on foul calls, 1; cut schedules to one game per week, 20 abandon double eliminations in county tournaments, 1; ban Class B teams from Class A tournaments, 1; license timers, 1; use 3 officials, 4; divide schools into 3 classes instead of 2.

One coached offered the novel idea that if the one-and-one free throw rule is retained, that the offending player get the second shot only if he makes the first one. Now he gets the second try only if he misses the first.

Nine coaches counseled: "Let's not change the rules—but let the game catch up with 'em."

Guerrilla Warfare Master Seeks Pennsylvania Pardon

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Pennsylvania's Pardon Board will be asked to consider the pardon plea of Yank Levy, master of the "Quick, quiet kill," who once taught American GIs the niceties of guerrilla warfare.

Levy became best known in the early 1940s as a soldier of fortune (he fought in Palestine, Transjordan, Mexico, Nicaragua and Spain) and as an active instructor in guerrilla tactics for both the British government and the United States. A book he wrote still is considered one of the best published manuals on the subject.

This is Levy's story as it comes from the Jewish Committee for Personal Service in Los Angeles and Philadelphia's Jewish Family Service.

He is now confined to a Los Angeles hospital, suffering from arthritis. A social worker's report stated his principal aim in life is a "clean record."

Back in 1927, Philadelphia police arrested five men and a woman on charges they were responsible for a series of holdups. The authorities said in the apartment where the five were seized they found also a small arsenal of weapons.

Levy and the others were brought to trial. He was convicted and sentenced to a 25-to-50 year sentence. He served six years and then was deported to his native Canada. From there he moved on to Spain and the life of a guerrilla.

On the strength of his record, the British hired him to teach his art to members of the Home Guard. Then, the U. S. used him as its first instructor at a school for guerrilla warfare.

After World War II, he contracted arthritis. His savings from his book and lecture tours dwindled because of his mounting medical expenses. That was his status when the Los Angeles social agency found him—broke. And he wanted above all else a "clean record."

The Los Angeles committee contacted the Philadelphia Jewish Family Service. Atty. Hanley Rubensohn, a member of the service's personal aid bureau, volunteered to help. A fund was raised to send Rubensohn to California for a personal talk with Levy.

Rubensohn reported back to the other members of the board he was convinced Levy had paid his debt to society.

That's why Rubensohn came to Pennsylvania's state capital today to argue Levy's case, to ask the Pardon Board to wipe out what Yank Levy claims is the only real blot on his record.

On a cold evening, after a rain, about 3,500 of us tourists went to see the Passion Play staged by Josef Meier. We sat in a vast amphitheater where the stage and buildings are permanent structures. Josef Meier plays the role of Christ. It is a magnificent performance, beautifully staged. Yet something in the text bothered me. Pontius Pilate was almost a hero. Judas Iscariot is more repentant than the Gospels say that he was. Caiaphas, the High Priest, is the villain of the play.

The text is definitely medieval and therefore startling in these times when we have a more historical view of the life, tribulations and death of Jesus than the medieval narrowness permitted. I spoke to Josef Meier about this and he told me, I think he said, that a 13th century text was used. The Passion Play leaves an impression which cannot ever be forgotten.

So, I continued to tour on the back roads of Florida, from the north of the State to Miami Beach where everything is made to glitter by electric lights and neon signs. The contrast is startling and the tourist returns to his home assured that in the United States, in an automobile, one can see everything.

Godfrey's Wings Given Clipping

WASHINGTON — Arthur Godfrey loses his wings for six months today. The Civil Aeronautics Board said the six-month suspension, on a charge of reckless flying, becomes effective in the absence of any appeal being filed before deadline.

Godfrey, while denying the reckless flying charge, said he would accept the ruling against him. He was accused of buzzing the Teterboro, N. J., airport with his twin-engine DC3 Jan. 7.

Sixty-nine others said they like the current plan of play, but offered suggestions for rule changes. Forty were definitely against the fire engine, many foul trend, while 19 opined the present code was "not too bad" but could stand some changes.

The controversial one-and-one free throw regulation was the target of the majority of gripes, 71 — or more than half the total — declaring it should be erased from the books.

Suggested changes, many of which probably will be suggested at the annual meeting of the Ohio High School Basketball Coaches Assn. meeting in Cleveland in connection with the March 26-27 state tournament, covered a wide range.

A break for the defense was asked by 15 coaches, and 13 others suggested that the charging-blocking rule be changed to penalize the boy with the ball, at least part of the time, for running into a defender.

The officials came in for their usual bit of criticism, too. Five coaches urged mandatory attendance of officials at schools to assure more uniform handling of contests; 3 urged a breaking up of the "monopoly of old officials," 3 insisted there is too much whistle tooting, another said the officials had too much power, and 3 said flatly "the officiating is lousy."

Most of the suggested changes centered around fouls and free throws. Seven coaches want defensive players given both inside spots on free throws, 10 want the free throw lane widened to give the smaller players a chance, 3 would ignore fouls having no bearing on the play, 12 want the 3-minute rule abolished, 6 want 2 fouls called for back court infractions, and 5 want more severe penalties for intentional fouls.

Two favor a 4-fouls-and-out rule to force better defensive coaching, 1 wants a limit of 6 fouls, and 3 would allow a boy to stay in the game after 5 fouls, with the opposition retaining the ball after the free throw. Ten others would let the fouled team take the ball out of bounds instead of trying the free throw.

Other suggestions were: Slow down the game, 4; adopt the full professional code, 2; outlaw the zone defense, 1; outlaw stalling, 3; do not require offending player to raise hand on foul calls, 1; cut schedules to one game per week, 2; abandon double eliminations in county tournaments, 1; ban Class B teams from Class A tournaments, 1; license timers, 1; use 3 officials, 4; divide schools into 3 classes instead of 2.

One coached offered the novel idea that if the one-and-one free throw rule is retained, that the offending player get the second shot only if he MAKES the first one. Now he gets the second try only if he misses the first.

Nine coaches counseled: "Let's not change the rules—but let the game catch up with 'em."

Guerrilla Warfare Master Seeks Pennsylvania Pardon

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Pennsylvania's Pardon Board will be asked to consider the pardon plea of Yank Levy, master of the "Quick, quiet kill," who once taught American GIs the niceties of guerrilla warfare.

Levy became best known in the early 1940s as a soldier of fortune (he fought in Palestine, Transjordan, Mexico, Nicaragua and Spain) and as an active instructor in guerrilla tactics for both the British government and the United States. A book he wrote still is considered one of the best published manuals on the subject.

This is Levy's story as it comes from the Jewish Committee for Personal Service in Los Angeles and Philadelphia's Jewish Family Service.

He is now confined to a Los Angeles hospital, suffering from arthritis. A social worker's report stated his principal aim in life is a "clean record."

Back in 1927, Philadelphia police arrested five men and a woman on charges they were responsible for a series of holdups. The authorities said in the apartment where the five were seized they found also a small arsenal of weapons.

Levy and the others were brought to trial. He was convicted and was sentenced to a 25-to-50 year sentence. He served six years and then was deported to his native Canada. From there he moved on to Spain and the life of a guerrilla.

On the strength of his record, the British hired him to teach his art to members of the Home Guard. Then, the U. S. used him as its first instructor at a school for guerrilla warfare.

After World War II, he contracted arthritis. His savings from his book and lecture tours dwindled because of his mounting medical expenses. That was his status when the Los Angeles social agency found him—broke. And he wanted above all else a "clean record."

The Los Angeles committee contacted the Philadelphia Jewish Family Service. Atty. Hanley Rubensohn, a member of the service's personal aid bureau, volunteered to help. A fund was raised to send Rubensohn to California for a personal talk with Levy.

Rubensohn reported back to the other members of the board he was convinced Levy had paid his debt to society.

That's why Rubensohn came to Pennsylvania's state capital today to argue Levy's case, to ask the Pardon Board to wipe out what Yank Levy claims is the only real blot on his record.

Superior Judge Herbert D. Walker, who handed down his decision yesterday, warned the actress and her husband against trading accusations in the presence of their daughter.

Vets Day Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has passed and sent to the Senate a bill to change the name of Armistice Day to Veterans Day. The holiday still would be observed Nov. 11.

On a cold evening, after a rain, about 3,500 of us tourists went to see the Passion Play staged by Josef Meier. We sat in a vast amphitheater where the stage and buildings are permanent structures. Josef Meier plays the role of Christ. It is a magnificent performance, beautifully staged. Yet something in the text bothered me. Pontius Pilate was almost a hero. Judas Iscariot is more repentant than the Gospels say that he was. Caiaphas, the High Priest, is the villain of the play.

The text is definitely medieval and therefore startling in these times when we have a more historical view of the life, tribulations and death of Jesus than the medieval narrowness permitted. I spoke to Josef Meier about this and he told me, I think he said, that a 13th century text was used. The Passion Play leaves an impression which cannot ever be forgotten.

So, I continued to tour on the back roads of Florida, from the north of the State to Miami Beach where everything is made to glitter by electric lights and neon signs. The contrast is startling and the tourist returns to his home assured that in the United States, in an automobile, one can see everything.

Godfrey's Wings Given Clipping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arthur Godfrey loses his wings for six months today.

The Civil Aeronautics Board said the six-month suspension, on a charge of reckless flying, becomes effective in the absence of any appeal being filed before deadline.

Godfrey, while denying the reckless flying charge, said he would accept the ruling against him. He was accused of buzzing the Teterboro, N. J., airport with his twin-engine DC3 Jan. 7.

Geraldine Conard, coach of the cheerleaders, presented letters and charms to the reserve and varsity cheerleaders, and Dixie Wallen received a silver megaphone. Ashville's hopes for a successful basketball season for next year were emphasized by Coach Barnetson who pointed out that only two members of the varsity squad graduated with several members of the reserve squad ready to move up to the varsity squad next year. The seniors who have completed their basketball playing for the high school are Jack Hutchison and Bill Robbins. The remainder of the evening was spent in round and square dancing.

Ohio's FFA Orators To Compete March 26 For State Title

Pickaway County Farmers can obtain experienced advice and up-to-date literature on their farming problems at the County Extension Office, located in the Post Office Building, S. Court St., Circleville. The office here, headed by County Agent Larry Best, is the link between district farmers and the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University.

Top orators of Ohio's Future Farmers of America will converge on Columbus, March 26. That's youth day on the March 23-26 Farm and Home Week program at Ohio State University.

Public speaking contest winners from the 15 FFA districts in Ohio will seek the state championship. Preliminary eliminations start at 9 a. m. in H & F building on the university campus, with the finals scheduled at 2 p. m.

For young people who want to learn more about livestock, the animal science departments at the University will offer demonstrations in Plumb Hall.

Other demonstrations on farming, scheduled especially for young men, are tractor clinic, farm buildings clinic, poultry dressing and soils.

In Campbell Hall, girls will hear about party time treats, baby sitting, arranging flowers and tips on career planning. And boys will have a chance to talk with university staff members about careers too.

Five, 10, 15, 20, and 25-year 4-H Club advisors will be honored at a luncheon meeting in the Ohio Union on Youth Day. They will receive certificates and pins recognizing their service to Ohio youth.

There will be discussions on getting started in farming and credit problems; and international farm youth exchange delegates will tell experiences they had living with farm families in other countries.

A show and sale of interest to cattlemen in and around Ohio will be the Ohio Shorthorn Breeders' Association Annual Show and Sale at Delaware on March 22.

The sale will feature 12 rugged bulls and 30 choice females at the Delaware Fairgrounds at 1 p. m., preceded by the show at 10:30 a. m.

The judge will be Fred McWilliams, Wilson, Ill. Col. Jack Halsey, Des Moines, Ia. will cry the auction, and Bob Schmidt, Delaware, will be sale manager.

A bug is forcing southern Ohio farmers to pay off government corn loans or deliver the corn to the Commodity Credit Corporation two to three months earlier than usual. The loans usually mature July 31.

Lowell Folsom, extension marketing specialist, says losses caused by anguonitis grain moths in past years resulted in the CCC decision to call loans in earlier. Loan maturity dates were advanced to get corn from moth areas into government storage bins where it can be treated before moths lay eggs. That will prevent the losses.

T. H. Parks, extension entomologist, says anguonitis grain moths lay eggs on stored corn during May and June. To prevent moth damage, he says corn must be treated before eggs are laid. Once the eggs are laid, they hatch and the moth larva eat away the inside of corn kernels.

In addition to loss of weight, corn infested with moth is contaminated for human food and can be used only for livestock feed.

Loans will mature either June 1 or May 1 for Ohio counties touching U. S. route 40 and south. The May 1 date is for extreme southern Ohio counties. Farmers should contact their local crop loan office for the loan maturity date for their county.

Contour farming not only saves top soil, but it boosts crop yields as well, reports the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee in citing information from Iowa State College.

"Corn yields increased 7 bushels per acre, soybeans 2 bushels and oats 5 bushels per acre by plowing and planting on the contour in the Iowa tests," says the statement.

"One of the reasons for higher yields on the contoured corn is the better stands. A lot of corn planted up and down hill is washed out by heavy rains. In dry years contour planting can save two or more inches of moisture during the season or crop growth."

"Farmers can usually cut soil losses in half on sloping land by contouring," the statement continues. "Operating costs are lower when fields are contour worked for tractor fuel is saved and wear and tear on machinery from crossing ditches is reduced."

"Although contouring will save soil it will not build it," says the committee's statement. "That's why it is so important to build the soil fertility through the use of fertilizers and other good management practices. Then you make the most efficient use of the water that is available on each acre. Then you get the greatest return from the hours of labor and machine expense you put in on each acre. Then you can realize the greatest possible profit from each acre under cultivation."

"Even with more than double normal rainfall since February through April, it's possible that water supplies in wells, springs and streams this Summer and Fall may again fail to meet demand," according to Lloyd Harrold, project supervisor of the soil and water conservation research station at Coshocton.

That's one of the points Harrold will cover in his Farm and Home Week topic, "The 1953 Drought and Its Effect on 1954 Crops." He also will report results obtained from different water conservation practices and from irrigation.

He will speak at 1 p. m., March 23 in Townshend Hall, Ohio State University, as part of the March 23-26 Farm and Home Week.

District Educators To Attend Meeting

District school officials will be guests at a Teachers' Recognition Night in Columbus next Thursday, joining approximately 250 of the Central Ohio commercial teachers, guidance instructors and school administrators.

Representing the local area will be Circleville City Schools Superintendent George A. Hartman; J. Wray Henry, Circleville High School principal; Robert W. Meyer, superintendent of Jackson Township School, and Alice Delong of Kingston, principal of Salt Creek Township School.

An annual event honoring commercial teachers, the affair will be held in the home office building of the Farm Bureau Insurance companies. Teachers will see demonstrations of the latest office machines and equipment, business methods and office work techniques. They will be guests at a banquet Thursday evening.

Early America ate here—and so can you!

TEXAS EASTERN SERVES THE COMPANIES THAT SERVE YOU
Wm. Penn Inn is still a landmark of good eating for Philadelphians and travellers on U. S. Highway 202. The inn's modern kitchen is equipped for gas supplied by the Gas Department of Philadelphia Electric Company, a customer of Texas Eastern.

You enter America's past at the William Penn Inn. You can easily picture men in cocked hats and knee breeches enjoying the warm hospitality of the house. Founded in 1714, this famous inn is still noted for fine food. Helping to maintain this 240-year-old reputation is a kitchen equipped for gas. The management chose gas, as do so many homemakers today, because it is clean . . . economical . . . and versatile—ideal for all cooking and baking.
